Hanna potentially affected states

Florida

The Florida credentialing/re-entry procedures are managed by the Florida Retail Federation (FRF). Critical Infrastructure Owners and Operators should register with FRF and will then be able to request a placard identifying them as essential personnel. Individuals requesting access post landfall need to have a valid photo identification and the placard from FRF (printable online). FRF can be reached via telephone at (850) 222-4082. If access is required and an individual is not already registered with FRF, they should contact the Florida State EOC at (850) 413-9969 to request and receive a temporary emergency access pass from the Florida State Emergency Response Team.

The Georgia Emergency Management Agency (GEMA) has a Standard Operating Procedure (SOP) in place for applying for and receiving “Disaster Critical Workforce Reentry Permits”. According to the SOP, critical infrastructure owners and operators need to have company issued photo identification and be in a marked company vehicle to be granted access through control points. Contractors, subcontractors and other designated representatives of the critical infrastructure owners and operators need to have a state issued “critical Workforce Disaster Re-entry Permit (vehicle “hang tags” or placards) and an employer issued photo identification. Permits are issued with serial numbers and are available from the GEMA Operations Division at (404) 635-7000.
